PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE TENTH CIRCUIT

The petitioner, ELLEN L. RAWSON, prays that a writ of certiorari issue to review the judgment and opinion of the United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit, entered in these proceedings on August 7, 1975.

OPINION BELOW

The United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit in an unreported opinion filed August 7, 1975, affirmed a jury verdict for the plaintiff-respondent.

This Court of Appeals subsequently denied the defendant-petitioner's Motion for a Rehearing in an Order dated December 18, 1975. The Opinion appears at Appendix A, infra, page 13 and the Order denying the Petition for Rehearing is found at Appendix B, infra, page 20.

JURISDICTION

The Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed a verdict for the plaintiff on Aug. 7, 1975, and denied defendant's timely Petition for Rehearing on December 18, 1975. This Petition for Certiorari to the Supreme Court of the United States was filed less than 90 days after the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals' denial of defendant's Motion for a Rehearing. The jurisdiction of the United States Supreme Court is invoked pursuant to 28 USCA §1254 (1).

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit is required to follow the applicable substantive law of New Mexico — the state in which the accident occurred and in which the suit was brought:

(a) As to the substance of instructions defining rights and obligations created by state law.

(b) As to the effect of the violation of state statutes by the minor plaintiff.

(c) As to the standard of care by which the conduct of the parents of the minor plaintiff is to be measured.

CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY PROVISIONS INVOLVED

1. 28 USCA §1652, entitled State laws as rules of decision, provides that:

> "The laws of the several states, except where the Constitution or treaties of the United States or Acts of Congress otherwise require or provide, shall be regarded as rules of decision in civil actions in the courts of the United States, in cases where they apply. June 25, 1948, c 646, 62 Stat. 944"

2. Section 64-19-2 of the New Mexico Statutes Annotated provides:

> "Every person riding a bicycle upon a roadway shall be granted all of the rights and shall be subject to all of the duties applicable to the driver of a vehicle by this act, except as to special regulations in this article [64-19-1 to 64-19-7] and except as to those provisions of this act which by their nature can have no application."

3. 64-18-28 New Mexico Statutes Annotated provides:

> "The driver of a vehicle within an intersection intending to turn to the left shall yield the right of way to any vehicle approaching from the opposite direction which is within the intersection or so close thereto as to constitute an immediate hazard, but said driver, having so yielded and having given a signal when and as required by this act, may make such left turn and the drivers of all other vehicles approaching the intersection from said opposite direction shall yield the right of way to the vehicle making the left turn."

STATEMENT

The parties will be referred to as they appeared at the trial level, with Robert H. Wilbee and Bruce Wilbee as plaintiffs and Ellen Rawson as defendant. The jurisdiction of the United States District Court was invoked pursuant to 28 USCA §1332. Diversity of citizenship existed, the plaintiff being a citizen of the State of New Mexico, and the defendant being a citizen of the State of Texas. And the amount in controversy was in excess of $10,000.00.

Bruce Wilbee suffered personal injuries when struck by an automobile driven by defendant, Ellen Rawson a/k/a Ellen Merrill. At the time of the accident, Bruce Wilbee was seven (7) years of age, and was riding a bicycle on a city street in Las Cruces, New Mexico. Suit was brought by Dr. Robert Wilbee, individually, and as father and next friend of the injured boy, to recover for the boy's personal injuries and for medical expenses incurred by the father. The action was brought in Federal District Court in Las Cruces, New Mexico, and there is no challenge to the jurisdiction of that court to hear the case. From a jury verdict awarding the plaintiff $22,244.08 (Appendix C, infra, page 21), the defendant appealed to the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals. (Appendix D, infra, page 22.) The defendant's motion for Judgment notwithstanding the verdict and for a new trial, which was denied October 3, 1974, had extended the time for filing the Notice of Appeal. (See Appendix E, infra, page 23.)

The defendant urged five (5) grounds for reversal of the verdict, only two of which are pertinent to this petition for certiorari. One of these appeal points argued that the trial court erred in instructing the jury on the effect of statutory violations by the injured bicyclist; the other alleged error in taking the issue of the parents' contributory negligence from the jury.

A New Mexico statute sets out the pertinent law on bicyclists as follows:

> "Every person riding a bicycle upon the roadway shall be granted all of the rights and shall be subject to all of the duties applicable to the driver of a vehicle by this act . . ." (64-19-2 New Mexico Statute Annotated)

This state statute further provides in 64-19-1 NMSA:

> "(b) The parent of any child and the guardian of any ward shall not authorize or permit any such child or ward to violate any of the provisions of this act.
> (c) These regulations applicable to bicycles shall apply whenever a bicycle is operated upon any highway or upon any path set aside for the exclusive use of bicycles subject to those exceptions stated herein."

There was evidence that the minor plaintiff violated several statutory regulations. Violation of such statutory regulations amounts to contributory negligence as a matter of law in New Mexico, provided that such statutory violation is a proximate cause of the accident, McKeough v. Ryan 79 NM 520, 445 P2*d* 585 (1968); Ferran v. Jacquez 68 NM 367, 362 P2*d* 519 (1961). However the United States District Court instructed the jury that this statutory violation is not negligence as a matter of law, but could only be considered by the jury as evidence of negligence.

In affrming the plaintiff's verdict, the Court of Appeals ruled directly contrary to New Mexico law as contained in 64-19-2 New Mexico Statutes Annotated, as it held:

> "There is a vast difference between the operation of a bicycle and the driving of a car. The bicycle is held to less rigorous standards."

Such a holding is also in direct conflict with the New Mexico state court decisions construing the above-cited bicyclist's statute [Aragon v. Speelman 83 NM 285, 288, 491 P2*d* 173, (Ct. App. 1971); Galvan v. City of Albuquerque 85 NM 42, 508 P2*d* 1339, (Ct. App. 1973); and Wilson v. Wylie 86 NM 9, 518 P2*d* 1213, (Ct. App. 1973).] These New Mexico appellate decisions hold that bicyclists are in the same category as motor vehicles for purposes of obedience to the traffic regulations.

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE WRIT

1) The Opinion of the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals flagrantly violates a basic tenet of federal appellate procedure. In the case at bar, the law of New Mexico controls the substantive issue presented, for the accident giving rise to this litigation occurred in New Mexico, and the suit was brought in the Federal District Court of New Mexico. Section 64-19-2 of the New Mexico Statutes Annotated (Quoted at Page 3, supra,) expressly makes bicyclists subject to the state's traffic regulations in the same manner as the drivers of motor vehicles.

But in spite of this direct statutory provision, the Opinion of the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals reads:

> "There is a vast difference between the operation of a bicycle and the driving of a car. The bicycle is held to less rigid standards." (Emphasis added.)

By utterly disregarding the substantive New Mexico law in point, the Opinion of the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals is in conflict with a long line of United States Supreme Court decisions.

Erie Railroad Company v. Tompkins 58 S. Ct. 817, 304 US 64, 82 L Ed 1188 (1938) states a doctrine which is fundamental to federal-state judicial relations:

> "Except in matters governed by the Federal Constitution or by acts of Congress, the law to be applied in any case is the law of the state. And whether the law of the state shall be declared by its Legislature in a > statute or by its highest court in a decision is not a matter of federal concern. There is no federal general common law. Congress has no power to declare substantive rules of common law applicable in a state whether they be local in their nature or general, be they commercial law or a part of the law of torts. And no clause in the Constitution purports to confer such a power upon the federal courts."

The decision in Erie Railroad v. Tompkins, supra, is of course, a landmark in American jurisprudence. [See discussion in Wright, Law of Federal Courts (2*nd* Ed. §55, pgs. 223-228.] And the Erie doctrine has withstood the test of time to remain a vital principle of federal practice, Hanna v. Plumer 380 US 460 85 S. Ct. 1136 14 L Ed 2*d* 8 (1965).

By ignoring a New Mexico statute, and substituting therefor its own view of the common law, the United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit has acted in direct conflict with the Erie Doctrine. One result of the Tenth Circuit's Opinion is to reach a result different than that which would have been reached in the New Mexico courts. Such a result was expressly condemned in Guaranty Trust Co. of New York v. York 65 S Ct. 1464, 326 US 99, 89 L Ed. 2079, (1945), wherein Justice Frankfurter wrote:

> "In essence, the intent of that decision (Erie Railroad v. Tompkins, supra) was to insure that, in all cases where a federal court is exercising jurisdiction solely because of the diversity of citizenship of the parties, the outcome of the litigation in the federal court should be substantially the same, so far as legal rules determine the outcome of a litigation, as it would be if it were tried in a state court."

New Mexico's state trial court would be bound to follow this state's statutory law (NMSA 64-19-2, supra,) and hold that bicyclists are held to the same standards as automobiles where such bicyclists use the public roadways. The Federal District Court hearing this case pursuant to 28 USCA §1332 should be bound by this same statutory law. However, a reading of the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals' Opinion does not even acknowledge the existence of such a statute. (See Appendix A, infra, page 13.)

Petitioner argued before the Federal District Court and United States Court of Appeals that:

1. A New Mexico statute (64-19-2 NMSA) makes bicyclists, regardless of age, subject to the state's traffic regulations;

2. That the plaintiff, Bruce Wilbee, violated several New Mexico statutes (64-18-21, 64-18-28, NMSA, supra, page 3) in the operation of his bicycle on the public streets;

3. That violation of the traffic statutes amounts to contributory negligence as a matter of law in New Mexico (McKeough v. Ryan, supra; Ferran v. Jacquez, supra); and

4. That the New Mexico case law does not exempt minors from compliance with this state's traffic statutes. (Adams v. Lopez 75 NM 503, 407 P2*d* 50, 1965; Wilson v. Wylie 86 NM 9, 518 P2*d* 1213, Ct. App. 1973).

Under the decision in Erie Railroad v. Tompkins, supra, and its progeny, state statutes and case law making particular conduct negligence per se, set out substantive law which must be followed by federal courts in diversity actions. (See Harlan, J. concurring in Hanna v. Plumer, supra). The failure on the part of the Federal District Court and Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals to do so, constitutes patent error, and deprived petitioner of the right to have this case tried under New Mexico substantive law.

The error arose in several different ways, but all errors pertinent to this petition for certiorari involved failure to follow the substantive law of New Mexico. Error arose, first of all, in the trial court's failure to instruct the jury in accordance with this state's law on the effect of the minor plaintiff's statutory violations. Rather than following New Mexico law as set out in the statutes [64-19-1, 64-19-2, and 64-18-28 et seq. New Mexico Statutes Annotated] and case law [McKeough v. Ryan, supra; Adams v. Lopez, supra; Marrujo v. Martinez 65 NM 166, 334 P2*d* 548 (1959); Galvan v. City of Albuquerque, supra; and Mellas v. Loudermilk 58 NM 363, 271 P2*d* 399, (1954)] the trial court and Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals adopted California law as set out in Daun v. Truax 56 Cal 2*d* 647, 365 P2*d* 407, 16 Cal Rptr. 351 (1961). California law on this issue is totally inapplicable because California treats statutory violations as creating only a presumption of negligence (Alarid v. Vanier 50 Cal 2*d* 617, 327 P2*d* 897, 57 Am Jur 2*d* 628, Negligence §245) whereas in New Mexico, statutory violations constitute negligence as a matter of law Turrietta v. Wyche 54 NM 5, 212 P2*d* 1041, (1949).

While the petitioner recognizes that the form of the jury instructions is not necessarily governed by New Mexico law; federal courts must look to New Mexico law for the substance of the instructions. [Lind v. Aetna Casualty and Surety Co. 374 F2*d* 377 (5th Cir. 1967); 2B Barron & Holtzoff Federal Practice and Procedure §1105].

Error was also predicated on the trial court's action in refusing to instruct the jury on the issue of the contributory negligence of the injured boy's parents. The Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed the action of the trial court in summary fashion, stating that this appeal point was "patently lacking in merit". However, both the trial court and Court of Appeals refused to give effect to a directly applicable New Mexico statute which reads:

> "The parent of any child and the guardian of any ward shall not authorize or permit any such child to violate any of the provisions of this act." (64-19-1 (b) New Mexico Statutes Annotated.)

Nor did the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals cite any New Mexico cases on the issue of a parents' contributory negligence. [See Latimer vs. City of Cloris 83 NM 610, 495 P2*d* 788, (Ct. App. 1972); and New Mexico Uniform Jury Instruction 13.2, cited in Bolen v. Rio Rancho Estates 81 NM 307, 466 P2*d* 873 (Ct. App. 1970).]

The federal judiciary is not allowed to ignore statutory and decisional law of the state whose law controls the substantive issues, regardless of whether or not the federal courts agree with the reasoning or policy considerations underlying the state law. [Coleman v. Associated Pipeline Contractors, Inc., 444 F2*d* 737 (5th Cir. 1971).] Thus, it is a violation of the Erie doctrine to follow either of the procedures employed by Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals in this case:

1. To pawn California law off on New Mexico as the better-reasoned law on an isue; or

2. To completely ignore New Mexico law and summarily dispose of an issue without discussion of authorities.

2) The importance of the issues presented transcends the case at bar, because the Opinion of the Tenth Circuit

Court of Appeals is representative of a trend in the Federal case law to pay lip service to the Erie doctrine, and then decide the case on the basis of whatever law is preferred by the appellate court. [Wright, Federal Courts 2nd Ed. (1970) §59.] It has become necessary for this Court to restate the importance of that principal of jurisprudence which was espoused in Erie Railroad v. Tompkins, supra, and Hanna v. Plumer, supra.

CONCLUSION

As applied to the case at bar, there is no getting around the fact that the Federal courts, trial and appellate, absolutely disregarded the applicable substantive law of New Mexico. And while New Mexico is not among the most populous states in the United States, it is nevertheless entitled to its own jurisprudence. The line is clearly drawn: in New Mexico statutory violations constitute negligence as a matter of law; in California, such violations create only a presumption of negligence. The Federal District Court and Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals followed California law. Erie dictates that New Mexico law be followed. For these reasons, and in order to preserve the principles of federal-state judicial relations which are fundamental to the American scheme of justice, petitioner prays that this Court grant certiorari to review the Opinion of the United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit.

TENTH CIRCUIT

No. 74-1784

ROBERT H. WILBEE, as father and next friend of BRUCE R. WILBEE, a minor, and ROBERT H. WILBEE, individually, Plaintiffs-Appellees, v. ELLEN L. RAWSON, a/k/a ELLEN L. MERRILL, Defendant-Appellant.	)	Appeal from the United States District Court for the District of New Mexico (D.C. No. 74-188)

Juan G. Burciaga of Ussery, Burciaga & Parrish, Albuquerque, New Mexico, for Plaintiffs-Appellees.

Eugene E. Klecan of Klecan & Roach, P.A., Albuquerque, New Mexico, for Defendant-Appellant.

Before SETH, McWILLIAMS and DOYLE, Circuit Judges.

DOYLE, Circuit Judge.

This is a diversity case in which at trial the plaintiffs were awarded a verdict for injuries suffered by the minor plaintiff, Bruce Wilbee, who was struck by an automobile while riding his bicycle. The collision occurred at an intersection in a residential area of Las Cruces, New Mexico. The plaintiff-appellee was making a left turn when the defendant-appellant, who was speeding, struck him causing injuries which resulted in a jury award of $22,244.08 damages.[1]

The main issue is whether the seven-year-old plaintiff-appellee could be held guilty of negligence per se. The trial court in its charge to the jury said that if the boy was found to have violated traffic regulations, his conduct would not be considered negligence per se but could be considered by the jury in determining whether he had met the standards of care required of a minor child by law.

Other issues are raised. These include:

1. Whether the trial court erred in allowing plaintiffs' expert to testify as to the speed of defendant inasmuch as the expert was unable to explain the formulas he used to determine her speed.

2. Whether the court should have submitted to the jury the issue whether the parent was guilty of negligence in failing to properly supervise the child.

3. Whether the court erred in receiving a transcript of a recording, notwithstanding that the recording itself (the best evidence) was available. The transcript was read to the jury.

A corollary point to the negligence per se issue outlined above is that the trial court should have directed a verdict for the defendant because the minor plaintiff was not, so it is argued, in compliance with the relevant statutory provisions.

We disagree with the defendant's arguments and conclude that the judgment of the district court should be affrmed.

[1] Bruce's father sued both on behalf of the child, and on his own behalf for medical expenses.

I.

New Mexico law governs the issue of negligence of a minor child. We do not find a statute which covers this, but there are cogent rulings of the New Mexico Supreme Court considering the question. See Larimer v. City of Clovis, 83 N.M. 610, 495 P.2d 788 (Ct. App. 1972); Marrujo v. Martinez, 65 N.M. 166, 334 P.2d 548 (1959). See, also, New Mexico Uniform Jury Instructions, U.J.I. 12.5 and comment.

It is fundamental that a child of tender years, and this boy was seven, is not held to the same standard as an adult. He is held to that degree of care which a reasonably careful child of the age, mental capacity, and experience of the child involved would use under circumstances similar to those shown by the evidence. See U.J.I. 12.5; see, also, Zamora v. J. Korber & Co., 59 N.M. 33, 278 P.2d 569 (1954); Marrujo v. Martinez, supra. One recognized variation holds a minor operating a motor vehicle to an adult standard and holds the minor responsible under the doctrine of negligence per se. See Adams v. Lopez, 75 N.M. 503, 407 P.2d 50 (1965). The reason for this is that driving a motor vehicle is an activity sufficiently fraught with hazard so that it is fair to require the minor to conduct himself in accordance with the standards required of an adult.

The New Mexico Uniform Jury Instructions furnish a guide that states that "ordinarily (the instruction on negligence per se) has no application to a violation of a statute or ordinance by a child."[2] It cites Adams v. Lopez, supra.

The courts in other states are not uniformly in accord with the New Mexico viewpoint. See Leonard v. Bratcher, 258 Md. 186, 265 A.2d 246 (Ct. App. 1970) (a 14-year-old held guilty of negligence per se); but see Daun v. Truax, 56 Cal. 2d 647, 365 P.2d 407, 16 Cal. Rptr. 351 (1961). It was held in this latter case that the negligence per se rule is basically inconsistent with the doctrine generally applied to children which allows the jury to consider the age and capacity of the child. See, also, Herrell v. Pimsler, 307 F. Supp. 1166 (D.D.C. 1969), wherein the court refused to instruct that violation of a traffic rule by an 11-year-old was negligence per se. See, also, Restatement of Torts Second § 283, which provides:

> Unless the actor is a child, the standard of conduct to which he must conform to avoid being negligent is that of a reasonable man under like circumstances.

The comment is enlightening and in accord with our discussion. Part c distinguishes the problem of special adult activity such as driving a vehicle.

In summary, then, the trial court's instruction allowing the jury to consider the violation of the statute as evidence of the child's negligence followed a New Mexico decision and the better reasoned viewpoint. Its refusal to instruct that any violation of the statute by this seven-year-old child constituted negligence per se was not error. As to the contributory negligence of the plaintiff seven-year-old, it does not appear from the record, as the defendant contends, that the evidence conclusively established his guilt of contributory negligence. While it does appear that he made a left turn sooner than he might have in light of N.M.S.A. 1953 §§ 64-18-21 and 64-18-28, nevertheless, it was a jury question as to whether the boy's conduct was negligent and was the proximate cause of his injury.

The defendant would have us hold that the presence of the bicycle in the wrong lane conclusively established negligence and proximate cause. He cites a number of automobile cases in support of his argument.[3] But none of these deal with the special problem presented at bar. There is a vast difference between the operation of a bicycle and the driving of a car. The bicycle is held to less rigid standards. We hold then that the trial court was not in error in refusing to direct a verdict for the defendant.

[3] Pavlos v. Albuquerque National Bank, 82 N.M. 759, 487 P.2d 187 (Ct. App. 1971); Paddock v. Schuelke, 81 N.M. 759, 473 P.2d 373 (Ct. App. 1970); Bolt v. Davis, 70 N.M. 449, 374 P.2d 648 (1962); Martinez v. Scott, 70 N.M. 354, 374 P.2d 117 (1962); Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Horne, 65 N.M. 440, 338 P.2d 1067 (1959).

II.

The defendant's contention that the father was guilty of negligence in failing to control his child is patently lacking in merit. The evidence of the boy's father was that he had allowed the child to ride in the street with some restrictions. This decision did not disclose negligence or contributory negligence on his part. The court was therefore correct in its refusal to submit this issue to the jury.

III.

We do not see error in the reception by the court of the transcript of defendant's statement given to the insurance company rather than the original recording. Plaintiffs' counsel obtained a recording and had a transcript made. The trial court heard the recording and made modifications in the transcript. It then allowed the plaintiffs to read a portion of the transcript to the jury.

It is not claimed that the transcript was inaccurate but, rather, that it should not have been received in view of the availability of the recording. It is true that ordinarily the existence of the original document, for example, precludes the admissibility of secondary evidence. See Federal Rules of Evidence, Rules 1002 and 1004. We view this, however, as a discretionary matter, and although it does not appear from the record as to why the court did it, we fail to see that any prejudice resulted from the use of the transcript.

IV.

We finally consider whether the trial court erred in allowing the police officer, Mr. Evans, to give expert testimony on the speed of the automobile. The witness had worked as a police officer from 1959 to 1964. From 1964 to 1969, he had worked for the New Mexico State Police. From 1969 onward, he was an accident investigator. He was shown to have attended accident investigator's school and to have taught and written on accident investigation. While the defendant does not dispute his qualifications on accident reconstruction, he does maintain that it was error to allow him to testify as to the speed. The witness measured the skid marks and determined a "coefficient of friction" which is a measure of the resistance of the highway, and then applied a formula which determined speed by multiplying the square root of distance of skid mark times friction by a constant of 5.5. It is lack of training of the officer in physics and mathematics which is the basis of defendant's objections.[4] A most extensive and careful cross-examination by defendant as to the basic knowledge of the witness was carried out. It appeared that he had written a paper on the use and derivation of this formula. He also said that it was an accepted formula. Following this exhaustive questioning, the court allowed him to testify that the defendant's minimum speed was 35½ miles per hour, whereas the speed limit was 25 miles per hour.

The law is clear that the trial court has discretion in the matter of determining the qualifications of an expert. See Phelps Dodge Corp. v. Atchison, T. & S.F. Co., 400 F.2d 20 (10th Cir. 1968); Grain Dealers Mutual Ins. Co. v. Farmers Union Coop. Elevator and Shipping Ass'n., 377 F.2d 672 (10th Cir. 1967); Tome Land & Improvement Co. v. Silva, 83 N.M. 549, 494 P.2d 962 (1972); Dahl v. Turner, 80 N.M. 564, 458 P.2d 816 (Ct. App.) cert. denied, 80 N.M. 608, 458 P.2d 860 (1969); Alford v. Drum, 68 N.M. 298, 361 P.2d 451

[4] It should be noted that defendant called Mr. Butler, the investigating officer, to testify as to speed. Butler had a two year associate's degree in electrical engineering, had been on the police force since 1973, and had received on-the-job training in determining speed from skid marks. Defendant's attorney maintained at the trial that Butler was qualified to testify as to speed because "he had done it on previous occasions and had studied it." Butler simply used a chart to determine speed. He did not explain how the chart was derived.

(1961). In effect, the defendant maintains that the witness' explanations were inadequate as a matter of law. We disagree. His explanations were rational and sufficient, and we see no need for a showing that he has a profound understanding of the underlying principles of mathematics and physics.

In our opinion the trial court did not commit error and the judgment should be affirmed. It is so ordered.
